Harriman Park Reopened February 15, 2013

Harriman Lake Park, located on the southwest corner of South Kipling Parkway and West Quincy Avenue in Littleton, Colo., was reopened to the public Friday February 15, 2013. The area has been closed since December 2011 for Denver Water to rebuild the 138-year-old dam, bringing it up to current regulatory standards and restoring its full storage capacity.

The new dam will raise the water level approximately 3 feet higher, increasing the surface area of the restored reservoir from its former size of about 55 acres to approximately 66 acres. The reservoir will be refilled gradually after the Office of the State Engineer completes its inspection process.

The project allows Denver Water to meet the irrigation needs of Harriman water users without adding demands to its potable water supplies or developing new sources of water. Denver Water Uses the water to deliver irrigation water to Fort Logan National Cemetery, Jeffco public Schools, Pinehurst Country Club and other nearby areas.

Denver Water Owns the reservoir, dam and land within the park, while Foothills Park & Recreation District manages the recreation at Harriman through an agreement with Denver Water.
